

Statistical Analysis

Quantitative (statistical) analysis of environmental data should be a key component of various aspects of coal-mine permitting. Data sets for statistical analysis relate to water monitoring, mine soils, and vegetation productivity. Statistical methods for evaluating vegetation success are generally explicitly specified by regulation or guideline. However, this may not be the case for water and soil data.